

Community Building

In 2013, CTPH hosted Connecticut's first patient engagement conference "Better Health: Everyone's Responsibility" and was attended by over 500 healthcare consumers and clinicians. This inaugural educational forum provided insights and resources from local, national and international experts to encourage the audience to take a much more active role in their health and in their healthcare.

As a 501(c)(3) organization and because of the company's mission to advance the quality, safety and cost-effectiveness of healthcare, Qualidigm is often looked on as the neutral convener of multiple cross-state or pan-regional activities. This role requires Qualidigm to pull together disparate stakeholders, often times including competitors, to find ways to work collaboratively in support of the common good.

As part of this effort, Qualidigm has developed deep skills in organizational development, assessments, and governance creation. Recent examples of this include the development and cultivation of the long-term care Connecticut Culture Change Coalition (CTCCC) and the Connecticut Partners for Health (CTPH).

Founded by Qualidigm in 2006, the (CTCCC) is a voluntary, grassroots collaborative of nursing home providers and stakeholders that support efforts to change the culture in nursing homes to places where people want to live and work. By sharing success stories and lessons learned, the CTCCC drives positive change in long-term care from institutional models of care to person-centered environments.

CTPH, founded and led by Qualidigm, is a working group of over 40 Connecticut healthcare stakeholders who work together to identify healthcare related issues that present challenges to consumers and the provider community in Connecticut. The group's mission is to engage consumers to become active, informed partners in managing their health and healthcare.
